

University of Sydney Archives

The Archives of the University of Sydney has begun issuing a periodical publication, The University of Sydney Archives Record. This will appear once each academic term, its purpose being to publicise details of recent accessions of archives and other records received by the University Archives. It will also contain brief notes on records already held in the University Archives, and on some aspects of University history. Vol. 1, No. 1 is dated March, 1973, and contains a good deal that is interesting to the outside reader. It also contains a brief list of records received by the institution during 1972. In addition, the University Archivist, Mr. G. L. Fischer, has produced an "Introductory Guide" to the University of Sydney Archives, which provides essential information to any scholar who wants to discover what sorts of material are held, and what finding aids are available.
