

An Apology

The authors of 'Hunters and Gatherers : From Research Practice to Records Practice', Archives and Manuscripts, Vol 25 No 2, Nov 1997 pp. 242-265, wish to correct the omission of citing the use of the following internal reports for their article:

- 'Report on the Survey of Nominated School of Chemistry Academics, Staff and Students' by Andrea Barnes (Australian Science Archives Project) and Donna McRostie (Records Services, University of Melbourne), May 1996.
- 'Report on the Survey of the School of Behavioural Science' by Sophie Papadopoulos (Records Services, University of Melbourne), September 1996.
- 'Report on the Survey of the Faculty of Education' by Kit Grady and Sophie Papadopoulos (Records Services, University of Melbourne), January 1997.

We also note that the 'Recovering Science - Strategies and Models for the Past, Present and Future' Conference Proceedings cited under the heading of 'Conference Papers' in our Sources were subsequently published in 1995. We would therefore like to include the editors of that publication in the citation:

- Recovering Science - Strategies and Models for the Past, Present and Future, Proceedings of a Conference held at the University of Melbourne, October 1992, edited by T. Sherratt, L. Jooste and R. Clayton, Australian Science Archives Project, Canberra, 1995.

On 4 July 1996 we held a celebration to mark the 20th anniversary of the appointment of Ken Smith as the first Archivist at Sydney City Council. Former staff members and friends gathered to share memories and toast past and future success. This photo shows the archivists who have headed the Council's Archives: from left to right: Sigrid McCausland (1988–91), Mark Stevens (1991+), Ken Smith (1976–80), Janet Howse (1980–88).

In August 1996 Renato Perdon visited The Philippines on holiday. While there he found himself the featured speaker at a seminar on the Sydney City Archives System organised by the Philippines National Committee on Archives. The photo shows Renato (seated, with pen) and the archivists and staff members from the National Commissions on Heritage, and on Culture and the Arts, who attended the seminar.
